

BACHELOR'S DEGREE APPLIED MODERN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE

LETTERS

INTRODUCTION

The University of Nîmes offers an original literature course with a focus on pre-professionalization.

Far from limiting the professional objectives of studying humanities to only primary and secondary school teaching and research, the aim of the three-year course is to develop veritable authors capable of producing a wide variety of text types in a wide variety of cultural subjects.

OBJECTIVES

The generalist degree with professional training is designed to provide a solid literary and linguistic education, whilst helping students develop a career plan. Specifically, the degree is designed around the professions likely to follow arts studies. It enables students to acquire solid knowledge of the discipline's foundations, strong written and spoken skills, and to discover the professions related to the course.

The three-year program is divided into six sections:

- «Literary culture»
- «Modern languages»
- «Pre-professionalization»
- «Method and language»
- «General knowledge»
- «Optional TU»

The third year prepares students for employment through (compulsory) internships and/or dissertations.
